DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Another of Vienna's simple Federal dwellings stands on the south end of Market Street, just beyond Church Street. It was owned in 1877 by T. J. Webb (see Lake, Griffing, Stevenson Atlas, 1877, Phila.). Like so many other houses in Vienna, the frame walls are covered with dirty-white asbestos siding which makes it look rather shabby. The one highlight of the building is its three bay Victorian porch which has jig-saw designs cut in the posts, arches, and cornice, reminiscent of cast ironwork of the same period. The house is composed of a five bay long, two story section with a one and one-half story wing. There are three chimneys at the gables. The facade is slightly off-center throwing the south window almost against the corner post. It was probably built in two sections. With a little care, the house could be as attractive as other houses in town.
